I agreed to film the presentation, and it was interesting. That's the most positive thing I can say about it, because I question a number of specific statements made. I can only hope that my questions to Eric Hatfield are taken seriously, because he needs to have specific answers to some very specific questions if his candidacy is to gain any traction. Questions regarding racial diversity and sensitivity cannot political footballs, because they become grenades and people get hurt through unsubstantiated accusations. My important question concerning grading the training on a scale of 1-10 was ducked because "I'm not trained to judge." If that's the case, then not being trained to judge is not trained to run for office.
